LSSI Raising Awareness of Elder Abuse

In Illinois last year, more than 7,000 older adults experienced abuse, often at the hand of their loved ones — the people they trust most in the world.

Intouch Services, a program of Lutheran Social Services of Illinois (LSSI), provides services to individuals experiencing abuse. Contracted through the Illinois Department on Aging and Northern Illinois Area on Aging, LSSI administers the Elder Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation Intervention Program to individuals residing in Whiteside, Lee, Ogle and Carroll Counties.

“July is Elder Abuse Awareness Month in Illinois, and LSSI wants to create awareness around this issue,” says Sarah Karras, program director for LSSI’s Intouch Services. “Abuse can come in the form of financial exploitation, or physical and emotional abuse, or neglect.”

It is estimated that there are at least 10 cases of elder abuse for every one that is reported. “This means that the vast majority of victims are suffering, often for years, because no one knows or cares to report the problem,” says Karras.

Elder abuse cannot be ignored. According to the Illinois Department on Aging, it is everywhere — in every town and in every neighborhood. Three-fourths of the victims of elder abuse in Illinois are women, with an average age of 79. About 75 percent of them are functionally impaired – either physically or mentally.

Four of five abusers are family members. Most are substance abusers. Some have snapped under the stress of caregiving, unaware that help is available.

Illinois law defines abuse to mean neglect; physical, mental or sexual injury; or financial exploitation to an adult 60 or older. When an elder cannot report for himself or herself, the law mandates the reporting of suspected abuse by service providers in many fields, including social services, law enforcement, public service and medicine, including paramedics and emergency medical technicians.

The law also mandates “an aggressive training program” about elder abuse to public and private agencies that may encounter abuse and exploitation of older people in the state. Such a program includes the use of signs in banks and other financial institutions that notify older people about their rights in the face of fraud and financial exploitation. State law also protects residents of long-term care facilities against abuse and criminal neglect by the owner or an employee of the facility.

One of the most important amendments to the elder abuse law prevents people who are convicted of elder abuse from receiving any property or otherwise benefiting after the death of the victim. This provision applies to anyone – family member or con artist – and to financial institutions as well.

“Help is out there for those experiencing abuse,” says Karras, “through service providers, such as LSSI, as well as tough state laws that protect elders.”

If you or someone you know is the victim of elder abuse, please call Intouch Services of LSSI at 815/626-7333 or the Illinois Elder Abuse and Neglect 24-Hour Hotline at 1-866-800-1409 (voice and TTY). All reports are kept confidential, and anonymous reports are accepted.

Founded in 1867, Lutheran Social Services of Illinois is a statewide, not-for-profit social service agency of the three Illinois synods of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America (ELCA), as well as an agency of the United Way. LSSI serves people of all faiths through an array of services at 89 program sites across Illinois.
