Seven Area Artists Exhibit at “Young at Art”

“Young at Art,” a two-month show of paintings by seven area artists, will open on Friday, September 29, 2006 at St. Matthew Center for Health, 1601 N. Western Avenue in Park Ridge. The opening reception is 4:00 – 7:00 p.m., and will give visitors and art patrons an opportunity to meet the artists. The public is invited to attend the opening reception or visit the exhibit during the show dates.

The exhibiting artists are Robert Eisenhart, Winifred Ericksen, June LaRoussa, Ruth Williamson Marturano, Patricia Schuler, Lois Zajdel, and Sandy Zver. They are residents of Chicago, Norridge, and Park Ridge, and have studied art at numerous locations, including The Art Institute of Chicago, Evanston Art Center, North Park College, University of St. Francis, park districts, senior centers, and with private instructors. Works on display will be watercolor and oil paintings.

This is the second exhibit this year of area artists at St. Matthew Center for Health. In addition to hosting art shows, St. Matthew provides ongoing art programs for its residents, bringing in professional artists for workshops, classes and art therapy.

St. Matthew Center for Health is a skilled nursing facility offering long-term care, rehabilitation services, respite care, hospice care, and a specialized dementia unit. It is a program of Lutheran Social Services of Illinois.
